HR Director

ABOUT

Inspired by Richard Branson's words, "If somebody offers you an amazing opportunity but you are not sure you can do it, say yes – then learn how to do it later," my career journey has been anything but linear. Without a clear roadmap, I've navigated my professional path with an open mind, driven by a desire to learn and connect deeply with people, and always with the willingness to embrace challenges with enthusiasm and passion. Even if sometimes, I am too much driven by the motto "Do it, and think afterwards", so far it has been a good driver. My inherent empathy and ability to read others have often been my compass, guiding me to roles where I could create a lasting impact. This heartfelt approach has culminated in my role as HR Director. My previous diverse experiences on different domains honed my skills while reinforcing the importance of human connections in business. Beyond my professional sphere, I'm a dedicated mother of two, I let the creative artist hiding inside me express herself in theatre on a piano, and I find a mental escape in running. Each day, whether in the office or at home, is a lesson in the importance of passion, adaptability, and meaningful connections.

I AM LOOKING TO MENTOR

People at career crossroads, unclear on which path is the right for them at this moment. Those needing a push towards their full potential, eager to step out of comfort zones, pursue passions, and stay authentic to themselves.
