ABOUT

I am a coach. I set-up my coaching practice 2 years ago. I work with private clients who want to become better leaders, steer their career in a direction that makes sense to them or start and grow a business on their own. I also facilitate leadership development programmes in global organizations and universities. Before that I worked for 20 years in an international environment for global organisations as a senior learning leader and consultant.

I love what I do because I see people growing and taking full ownership of their professional life every day. Mentoring and coaching with me is about your uniqueness. It is about giving you a space to explore and discover freely so that you can figure out what really suits you. Those who work with me say that my style is gentle and natural, that the true essence of the learning of each session emerges in one sentence and distills for sustainable change.

Mentoring is a conversation that will be led by you and just for you. I will always listen deeply first and offer to share my knowledge if it is in service to you.
