

Jacqui Syndercombe

Leadership and Transformation Coach

ABOUT

I grew up in South Africa and moved with my family to France in 2001. After a long career in Finance and Administration, working with diverse cultures in South Africa, the UK and France, I left the corporate world to retrain as a Team coach and started my own business in 2021. In addition to my passion for helping people build better relationships so they can thrive in the working environment. I am also helping leaders transform their organisations towards a more responsible business model.

Starting my own business has been a long and uphill journey with a steep learning curve in all areas and I have been fortunate enough to be supported by amazing people in PWN.

I AM LOOKING TO MENTOR

Someone who would like to improve and develop their authentic leadership capacity and improve their professional relationships or someone who needs support in introducing sustainability into their job or organisation.
