Coach & Seminar Leader

ABOUT

I have a proven set of communication tools that I will share to help anyone get where she or he is going as confidently as possible. I am a communication trainer and workshop leader and became a certified communication coach in the mid-90s. I have coached individuals and designed and led seminars in Canada, the United States and France, helping thousands of business professionals of all cultural backgrounds and a variety of professions to communicate more effectively at work and in all domains of their life.

Do you feel like the way you communicated before isn't working as well for you in this current situation? That is very predictable. While there are many courses on management styles and processes, how you need to speak, listen, write and present differently is rarely addressed. In addition, if you are managing an intercultural team or department it is even more imperative to learn how to adapt your communication style to this never-before-lived experience.

My particular focus currently is on expanding awareness of the unique challenges of communicating across cultures and the importance of developing an intercultural communication skill set. This is vital when working within an international business context, whether at home or abroad.

I AM LOOKING TO MENTOR

Someone who has just been promoted to a middle or upper-level management position and needs to adapt their communication style.
